Get After the Weeds

At the regular meeting of the Board of Trade Wednesday night Pres Prest in the chair, a strong resolution was passed condemning the lax manner in which the weed act was being enforced this year, and the secretary was instructed to write the local inspector, the chief inspector and the Hon. A. J. MacClean asking that steps be taken at once looking to the eradication of the pest. The business men present criticised very justly the farmers for their pronounced inactivity with respect to this very vital matter, and their total absence from the meeting came in for some hard usage.

Other important matters were discussed, chief among them being the establishment of a creamery. This subject was broached by a deputation of prominent farmers from the east and south east of the city, headed by Charles T. Cousins, and the matter was referred to the Industrial committee for investigation. The report of their findings will be presented at the next meeting.

Hold Big Fall Fair

Raymond will hold a fair this fall. Indeed, it promises to be the biggest fair in the history of this district. The decision of the directors was reached last Saturday evening, and a whirlwind campaign has been instigated. It is going to be a wide-open fair, open to the world.

In connection with the exhibition a carnival will be held. There will be a Queen of the Carnival crowned and presented with a gold watch. Besides this, a race program, fireworks display, parachute ascension, midway attractions etc, will be outstanding features.

It really is going to be a big thing. Prepare now. The dates are Aug. 30 to Sept. 1. O. F. Ursenbach, who so ably managed the exhibition last year, is again in charge, and is devoting his entire time to the work.

The Bottle The Boy X

This week we cancelled our advertising contract with the Licensed Victuallers' Association of Alberta. This contract meant money to The Leader—a rare article to the average publisher, especially in war time.

The contract was cancelled for a number of reasons, but chiefly because of the great, underlying principle involved. Serious reflection has convinced us that we made a mistake in accepting the business from the Liquor Interests. We accepted it because dollars looked as big as elephant's feet. They still look big, but the souls of men look bigger. Has The Leader shown weakness in its action. We will let a sage answer: "The wise man changes his mind, but the fool never."

We have come to the conclusion that it is not logical for a newspaper to accept patronage supporting a cause to which its editorial sentiment is diametrically opposed. One cannot serve two masters.

We have not been influenced by any outside source. Our policy is not dictated by any man or set of men.

No financial support is expected from the Temperance Forces. Our greatest recompense will be in the knowledge that we have not been instrumental in promoting a traffic which aims its destructive missiles at the very vitals of Society. We do not care to be a patty to any man's downfall.

The Liquor Business is a bad business. As a public menace it should be abolished. The proposed Act, while in some respects it may not appear so, yet it is one that will seal the fate of Booze in Alberta. (Signed) The Anti-Tempered News will very likely be found in Alberta.

Drunkenness and Moral Degradation are twin. They walk in arm. the ambassadors of Ruin, Misery and Despair. Their terrible effects extend to the third and fourth generation, there rarely is a fifth. Nature wisely steps in and calls a halt.

A prominent business man of Lethbridge remarked to us the other day: "Fifty years from now, the Liquor Business will look as black as Slavery." From appearances his prediction will come true. The fate of Booze has been sealed. July 21st is the day Alberta gives John Barleycorn his banishment papers: Mr. Voter, your duty is clear. Vote for the Act.

VOTE FOR THE BOY.

Wool Growers Meet the Buyers

Southern Alberta wool growers met the buyers at the Board of Trade building, Lethbridge, Tuesday. There were present from the south line, Ray Knight, Levi Harker, John Hen-
inger, J. F. Bradshaw, R. W.
Bradshaw, J. B. Ririe, R. C. Harvey, O. T. Patterson, John I.
Chipman, Dave Powelson and D. Fowler. There was nothing definite done, a difference in price holding up business. As far as we observed the meeting was merely a "feeler." The sheepmen consider 28 cents as a reasonable figure this year.

Shearing is now in full swing
at the big plant at Conrad on the Weyburn line. The foreman Levi Harker, told the Leader
there was about 50,000 head to be clipped with a gang of forty to do it. Ray Knight will shear
on the Little Bow. R. C. Harvey and R. W. Bradshaw are through and their wool baled ready for market. Needless to add they are both wearing broad smiles.

Magrath To Hold Big Fall Exhibition

The Magrath fair will be held this year on August 25 and 26. B.
Makin is the secretary again this season, and he is working energetically for the fair's success. He appeals through the Leader, as does also the president, J. B. Ririe for the support and co-operation of the people. Generous prizes are offered as the premium list, which will be off the press within a few weeks, will show.

An excellent program of sports
and races will be held in connection with the fair.

Does Farming Pay; Ask A. Minor

Just fancy yourself depositing a $5,000 cheque for 1914 grain just sold for $1.50 a bushel. This is no dream, but a reality. And A. Minor was the lucky man. Mr. Minor sold wheat to the Ellison Milling company, which netted him just one dollar short of $5,000. The wheat was of exceptionally fine milling quality, and brought the highest price. The farmer who can afford to hold his wheat until the prices come is the one that makes the money.

"A good place to Trade"

"War represents the most appalling instrument of squandering," he declares. "Not only does it squander the lives of millions of men, but it is also a means of destroying wealth and resources by a few heavy guns. Standards of living are lowered, and the nations are reduced in part; the purchasing power of each unit has decreased. War is a waste of ways represents an excess of consumption, followed by a crisis. However, the crisis is not always as crushing nor as long as is feared beforehand. Many of the things which are destroyed serve to be replaced, and the losses are not so great as to be renovated or done away with. The war has caused their disappearance."

[illegible]

Art Treasures Damaged. Elsewhere in the path of the battling armies irretrievable damage has been done to priceless art treasures. It is now realized that much of this might have been avoided if the authorities had hidden the various objects. The "Christ Appearing From the Cross," by Rubens, at Arras, and this is said to have been destroyed by shell fire. Another work that suffered there was Van Dyck's "Christ in the Tomb," which was destroyed by the Germans. Rheims were damaged or destroyed. Among the pictures thought to have been lost are "Nativity," by Tintoretto; "Christ Appearing to Mary Magdalene," by Titian; "Christ and Angels" by

The treasury of the cathedral contained many costly reliquaries and precious church plate, among them, a chalice and monstrance of the twelfth and fourteenth centuries, vessels and ornaments used at the coronations of different kings of France and the Saint Ampoule. The last is the successor of the Ampulla Remensis, which a dove is said to have brought from heaven. With the holy oil which this flask contained all the kings of France were anointed down to Louis XIV.

precious objects at Liege, Louvain and other cities, the Belgians determined to take effective precautions to prevent a even greater calamity at Antwerp.

It is estimated that the art treasures of Antwerp are worth $1,000,000,000, and need hardly be added that to preserve them for unhappy and ruined Belgium is a really great national service.

Photographs have already been published showing the Belgians removing Rubens' "Descent From the Cross" and other famous masterpieces from the cathedral of Antwerp, but it was not known what had been done with them.

They were placed on trucks specially

THE complexion is a matter that should not be left to take care of itself when one travels. One of the very important things to remember is to beware of depending upon such soaps as are provided by the hotels or the friends you are visiting. These may be above reproach as far as goodness is concerned, but they may not suit your needs as well as those you are accustomed to use at home.

Water in which one washes the face and hands is another essential that should not be overlooked when "on the road." At different stopping places the water may be hard or soft or brackish, and all these conditions need the beneficial influence of benzoin almond meal or some other soothing ingredient to prevent roughening the skin. It is never advisable to wash the face too often when traveling. Rather, take a leaf from one of the little books of French powder papers to be found constructed for this purpose and carried away to the military headquarters where they disappeared behind closed doors. "The Descent From the Cross" is the chief of the series of colossal works by Rubens that decorated the cathedral. This work, with its wonderful representation of human figures in its pathos and its tragedy, is by many considered the greatest picture ever painted.

A thrill went through the world as the thought that this great picture might be destroyed by bombs dropped from an aeroplane or shot to pieces by bullets or even taken away from the country where it had been since its author's lifetime.

It is now known how "The Descent From the Cross" and the other pictures were safeguarded. Inside the military headquarters they were removed from their frames and rolled up, at the same time being carefully preserved from injury and cracking by quantities of burip and soft packing. Each roll was then inserted in a heavy water-tight metal container and sealed up.

The rolls were then dropped from steamboat in various parts of the broad and deep river Scheldt. The position of each roll was taken by exact mathematical measurements of various objects on shore.

The reasons for keeping the final disposition of the pictures secret are obvious. Only the highest officers of the Belgian army know where the objects are hidden. Until they return to Antwerp these art treasures must be kept to the world. For the Germans to hunt for them in the muddy bottom of the Scheldt would be worse than looking for a needle in a haystack. They can only be found with the aid of the chamois.

If the Belgians never regain their country, it seems probable that these works will be permanently lost. They may become one of the mysteries of history, like the traditional burial place of Alaric the Goth.

Many works of less value were removed to London, and it is probable that most of these will come to the market. Negotiations for their sale have already been opened with some American collectors.

home of the greatest masters of the Flemish school. In its museums and galleries are many works of Quent Matsys, Rogier van der Weyden, Bernard van Orley, Anthony Van Dyck.

in the shops and cleanse the face with it. Still another is to use a small piece of absorbent cotton dipped in alcohol, but this should not be applied too often.

Be sure to take on your journey a dainty boudoir cap for wear on your progress from the berth to the toilet room. There is no excuse for the appearance of an untidy head if one will only take the trouble to provide a series of these little caps to don en route.

If you wear a face veil when traveling be sure to shake it carefully whenever you remove it. A washable white face covering is the very best to select, as it may be laundered at the moment's notice, hung up in the sun

FOR MACKINTOSHES.
MACKINTOSH coats which have become hard and rigid may be easily cleaned with lime and water and made to look as good as new. A handful of the best gray lime dissolved in half a bucket of water applied with a small sponge makes it better. Repeat after three hours.

ORIENTAL EMBROIDERIES USED

As soon as the embroiderers took to their new designs, the Chinese saw the inspiration for their own new fashions. Their clothing began using well known Chinese patterns for their designs it was then expected that women would find them Chinese available, so they are now wearing belts, for collars, for waistcoats. You would be in the fashion you must do so too. You may have the opportunity in some small Chinese shop to buy in the new silk feathers. The Chinese fans are also fashionable and they are being wielded at the opera and many dinner parties. The fans are easily got, especially with the new silk feathers. Nothing but the new desire to wear Chinese has brought into favor the wearing of these feathers in the hair as aigrets, although it was helped by this new design also in the new silks for spring.

NEW OLIVE STONER.
A SMALL, but helpful little tool

the cook comes in the shape of small olive stoner. It is well known how inconvenient it is to pit olives by hand when they are needed for salads and other dressings. This little device, which looks like a miniature punch, is so arranged that the olive is placed under the pitter, which quickly and easily removes the entire stone without waste.

REPARATIONS are being made for the celebration of the fifth anniversary of the organization of the Boy Scouts of America. The organization is celebrating its fifth anniversary in the following manner:

out was shown Saturday morning, Dec. 1 and 6 last, when an order of mobilization reached Troop Eighteen of the Eastern District of the Boy Scouts of America. The information that the scouts were to turn out to search for Mr. Walter Breck was given to the scouts at 8 o'clock of the morning before, being listed last seen at the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad depot at 10:30 a. m. The time that the order of mobilization was in the hands of Scoutmaster William Mercer Breck the boys were en route to the scene of the search. On Saturday morning the following day, Saturday a more extended search for Mr. Breck was made through the forest of the Eagle Rock reservation, overlooking the city of Erie, Pa. The territory two miles long and over a mile wide, full of tangled clumps of bushes and trees, a thick growth of vines and weeds, well as dense forests was searched so thoroughly that the police officers were confident that the investigation but must have fallen under the

In the last few years the boy scouts of northern New Jersey, Connecticut, Maine, Illinois and of many other parts of the country have been called upon to search townships and larger sections for lost persons and in some instances contributed materially to the clearing up of mysteries. In the case of the missing boy, Robert, the Scoutmaster, typical attitude of the scout movement was shown by a vote put to them when they were assembled before the search began on the heights of Eagle Rock. Scout Commissioner Gray addressed the boys and read a description of the person for whom they were to search. How she was dressed when she disappeared was described. "You are to find life in this search. If you come to a cliff in the forest you are to go around it and not up over its front if it looks dangerous, but do not leave any space unsearched. The Scoutmaster will give ethics of the scout movement to accept a dollar of any reward that may have been offered. We are making this search for the good of the general public."

These boys are not training to be come soldiers, and it is not the purpose of the organization for which such men as Ernest Thompson Seton and Daniel Beard have stood sponsors to fit boys to augment the United States army when they become men. It is rather to train them in a knowledge of woodcraft, of the forests and streams how to give first aid to the wounded and how to take care of themselves in the wilderness. It is to give them strong, hardy bodies, a love for all wild things and to stand with endurance and labor or journey they may be called upon to perform.
